A race is a grouping of humans based on shared physical or social qualities into categories generally viewed as distinct by society. First used to refer to speakers of a common language and then to denote national affiliations, by the 17th century the term race began to refer to physical (phenotypical) traits. Modern scholarship regards race as a social construct, that is, a symbolic identity ...

Essai sur l'inégalité des races humaines (Essay on the Inequality of the Human Races, 1853–1855) is the infamous work of French writer Joseph Arthur, Comte de Gobineau, which argues that there are differences between human races, that civilizations decline and fall when the races are mixed and that the white race is superior. It is today considered to be one of the earliest examples of ...

The term race or racial group refers to dividing the human species according to physical characteristics that are inherited. The most widely used human racial types are those based on visual traits (such as skin color, cranial, facial features, or type of hair).. When classifications of human races were first done, there were relatively few inter-racial marriages.

You missed the mark a bit there. You pointed out that, "Intelligence is not equal throughout the races. Examples of this are evident in the inventiveness of a particular group, what technologies they create, the societal structure they create, their art and their sciences", a statement which in and of itself is a contradiction.
